

Renewable energy and insulation experts Solarwall of York have started to offer a programme of informative seminars to local businesses and groups of individuals. These bespoke seminars, which will be held at the Clifton based, award-winning Energy Centre, cover subjects from Solar PV and the government's Feed-in-Tariff, to the different kinds of insulation available.

The seminars, which are offered completely free of charge to interested parties, will be led by Solarwall's team of energy experts and can be tailored to cover a multitude of topics and technologies. Further information and a full list of subjects currently available, can be found on The Energy Centre website: www.theenergycentreyork.co.uk

Grant Henderson, Director of Renewables at Solarwall, said of the new programme: "It always happens; you receive details of some seminar or event that you may be interested in but you are never sure if this particular presentation is worth your time and effort. What we're saying is very simple: tell us what you'd like, or need to know. We invite people to draw upon our thirty plus years of experience in the industry. With forthcoming schemes such as the Green Deal, businesses and private individuals will be required to be more 'renewable energy' savvy and that's where Solarwall, via these free seminars, comes in."

Solarwall is a long-established home energy company based in York and servicing Yorkshire, Humberside, Lincolnshire and the North East. Solarwall of York provides cost effective energy saving solutions to reduce fuel bills, combat climate change and make homes warmer.

Since the company was founded over 33 years ago they have saved the local area over 1.5 million tonnes of CO². They have a commitment to quality and reliability and offer guarantees on all the work they carry out.