

LONDON – 27th January 2011 - As more and more energy companies are announcing price hikes, homeowners are looking at ways of cutting the price of their energy bill. Free Solar PV from HomeSun, the UK leading free energy company, could provide just the answer.

Experts have warned that energy bills are set to double every five years which by 2016 would mean as much as a £2,000 annual bill for a family in a three-bedroom house.

Daniel Green, CEO at HomeSun, said: “Free and low cost solar energy with HomeSun instantly cuts your electricity bills and helps protect you from future price rises. With a potential annual saving of 30% or more, and government-backing through the Feed-in Tariff, we’d encourage every homeowner to check in with us to see if their roof is eligible for a free or low cost solar system.”

Alan Cotton a retired Engineer from Newport in the Isle of Wight has done just that. “I have found since the solar panels have been fitted that the saving at the moment is over 35%, which is brilliant!” He has been monitoring his meter four weeks before and after installation and found that his electricity dropped from £25.24 to £16.55 in November despite the harsh winter conditions.