

Leading environmental health consultants, Perry Scott Nash Associates Ltd, has received full accreditation from the Contractors Health and Safety Scheme (CHAS) to act as CDM Co-ordinators for its clients.

CHAS is a market leader for health and safety pre-qualification in the UK and being CHAS registered gives buyers confidence that a supplier is able to meet their health and safety requirements.

More importantly, CHAS registration saves buyers time and money when it comes to checking out a supplier's suitability as CHAS has done all the work for them.

Matthew Clayton, Client Services Manager (CDM) at Perry Scott Nash, comments, "We're delighted to have received CHAS accreditation for our Construction Design and Management (CDM) co-ordination work.

"We have years of experience as environmental health consultants and construction safety advisors across many industry sectors and offer a unique CDM co-ordinator service, which addresses regulatory compliance issues such as food safety, fire safety and environmental protection. At the same time we can ensure that a company's CDM responsibilities are met.

“Receiving this accreditation alongside our corporate membership of the Association for Project Safety proves that we practice what we preach to the industry benchmark. It means that potential and existing clients can trust that Perry Scott Nash has the expertise to fulfil its promises.

“It's good news for us and good news for our clients.”
